The audio is worse since no matter what I do, speaking into the microphone is just a bust. They assume you lack the skills and ability process thoughts into Russian even with translator. I used it first set a lot of messages on social media to new friends only to find out those messages were a jumbled mess of random words. I was using a different translator when I saw a doctor using Google to communicate with a Spanish only patient. It uses understandable language for our US - Mexico border area. All you need to do is install the Nox Application Emulator or Bluestack on your Macintosh. Not to mention, taking pics is a nightmare. Now click Next to accept the license agreement. I love that you can translate live with the camera because a lot of times I'm watching a broadcast or something and trying to keep up with everyone. I'll say something into the microphone, and it won't do anything. No matter how much I say, real words or not, it doesn't ever even acknowledge that I'm done talking and if I hit any buttons, the X to close it or microphone button that you'd think would tell what it said, just cancel out of it. Indispensable app By Mobjack11 (Pcmac user) I use many different languages throughout each day, usually just little phrases here and there in my writing. It translates whole pages of text instantly without error. You should see the icon. Or at the very least, why can't I translate more then one thing in a picture, and do I have to take the same picture again and again just to see everything it says? but overall I really like it it's the one I use most and I've got some I paid for that just don't stack up. For the past two years, I have used a different Spanish translator/dictionary App. Most of the tutorials on the web recommends the Bluestacks app and I might be tempted to recommend it too, because you are more likely to easily find solutions online if you have trouble using the Bluestacks application on your computer. Need to continually update and add new features This app is so much better than Microsoft translator. Click on it and it will take you to a page containing all your installed applications. Why can't it just detect the words itself? (at least so far I think it's been!). The app is also by Google, and thus it is highly aspirational in its features, and each update seems to bring further enhancements that may or may not be truly useful. The app is very straightforward in its basic function of translating text that is input by the user. So if you zoom into a certain part, it's hard to zoom back out, and you can't move the picture at all without zooming in or out. You have to highlight with your finger the phrases you want translated, but you can't move the picture around easily. Once you found it, type Google Translate in the search bar and press Search. So if you zoom out in a way that makes the pic go off to the side, well, too bad. Now, press the Install button and like on an iPhone or Android device, your application will start downloading. If you want to use the application on your computer, first visit the Mac store or Windows AppStore and search for either the Bluestacks app or the Nox App >> . You will see an icon called "All Apps". Step 4: for Mac OS HI. Mac user! The steps to use Google Translate for Mac are exactly like the ones for Windows OS above. Step 3: for PC - Windows 7/8 / 8.1 / 10 / 11 Now, open the Emulator application you have installed and look for its search bar. Eventually the kinks get worked out based on user feedback, which is how I think it should be. It was slow and tedious, only would translate a short paragraph at a time, but worse - it inserted words which were clearly wrong. If you do the above correctly, the Emulator app will be successfully installed.
